SHAKSPERE, the most frequently quoted, because the most universal-minded Genius that ever lived, of all Authors best deserves a complete Concordance to his Works. To what subject may we not with felicity apply a motto from this greatest of Poets? The Divine, commending the efficacy and "twofold force of prayer—to be forestalled, ere we come to fall, or pardoned, being down;" the Astronomer, supporting his theory by allusions to "the moist star, upon whose influence Neptune's empire stands;" the Naturalist, striving to elucidate a fact respecting the habits of "the singing masons," or "heavy-gaited toads;" the Botanist, lecturing on the various properties of the "small flower within whose infant rind poison hath residence, and med'cine power," or on the growth of "summer grass, fastest by night, unseen, yet crescive in faculty;" the Philosopher, speculating upon "the respect that makes calamity of so long the dread of something after death, the undiscovered country, from whose bourn no traveller returns;" the Lover, telling his "whispering tale in a fair lady's ear," and vowing "winnowed purity" and "persistiv constancy" of his "heart's dear love;" the Law discussing some "nice sharp quillet of the law;" the Musician, descanting on the "touche sweet harmony;" the Painter, describing his art, that "pretty mocking of the life;" the Novelist, seeking an illustrative heading to a fresh chapter, "the baby figure of the giant mass come at large;" the Orator, labouring an emphatic point in an appeal to the passions of assembled multitudes, "to stir men's blood;" the Soldier, endeavouring to vindicate his profession, by vaunting the "pomp and circumstance of glorious war;" or the Humanist, advocating "the quality of mercy," urging that, "to revenge is no valour, but to bear;" and maintaining that "the earth is wronged by man's oppression,"—may all equally adorn their page or emblazon their speech with gems from Shakspeare's works.

To furnish a faithful guide to this rich mine of intellectual treasure, superadding what was defective in my predecessors, Twiss and Ayscough, has been the ambition of a life; and it is hoped that the sixteen years' assiduous labour devoted to the work, during the twelve years' writing,* and the four more bestowed on collating with recent editions and correcting the press, may be found to have accomplished that ambition, and at length produced the great desideratum—a complete Concordance to Shakspeare.

* I cannot refuse myself the pleasure of mentioning that the day which witnessed the conclusion of this task, was the birth-day of the best of mothers—Mary Sabilla Novello; she who forms the glory and happiness of her children; she who first inspired me with a love for all that is good and beautiful, and who therefore may well be said to have originated my devotion to Shakspeare.

The appearance of a Preface with the concluding number of a periodically published work, though it possesses the advantage of affording an opportunity of commenting upon any thing that may have occurred in the course of printing; yet on the other hand, it involves a degree of disadvantage to the author, more especially in the present case, where there was judgment to be exercised in the admission or omission of certain words, and the right of that judgment to be vindicated and explained. The apparent inconsistency of omitting particular words when used in one sense, while they were retained in other instances, could only be accounted for by that discretionary power, which the author must claim in the Preface; where good and sufficient reason could be advanced why that power was not merely exercised for the sake of condensation, but likewise for perspicuity, and the especial benefit of the quoter. For instance, it might at first excite surprise to find so few examples of the word let; but by omitting it as an auxiliary verb (where the simple fact of its being universally joined to another verb of more importance, renders it less likely to suggest itself as a means of reference, as—“let me remember thee what thou hast promised,”) and retaining it merely in its more singular sense, the space gained is the enormous difference between 17 lines and 2184, or six printed pages of three columns each; while at the same time the few important instances in which the word occurs are thus rendered far more clearly apparent and easy of reference.

This was felt to be so valuable an arrangement, that, even during the course of printing, thousand lines of MS. were cancelled—thus: well, omitted as an adverb, saves about lines, and leaves clearer the word as a noun, and where it indicates health; it is also used where a pun is involved, as—“would not this ill do well?”

It must be borne in mind that these omitted references are so frequent, as well as of such significance, that their retention would but have encumbered, and (so to say) hidden the other references to the same word of more distinct and unquestionable importance: as an example of this, “my lord,” as a mere title, occurs in the play of Hamlet alone, no fewer than 92 times!

Come, look, marry, pray, truth, truly, and well, when used merely interjectionally, and till and well, as adverbs, are omitted. Like, as an adverb merely conveying a simile, as—“he receives comfort like cold porridge,” from the multiplicity of examples, and because such similes invariably contain words more striking—is omitted. Toward and towards are only retained when used peculiarly.

Titles: as master, mistress, lord, lady, king, count, don, signior, etc., when joined to proper names, are omitted; as are also lord and lady, when used merely as sir and madam. A few verbs and adverbs, as, to be, to have, to do; and beyond, some, never, etc., are omitted, on account of their insignificance, and frequent recurrence; also, oaths and exclamations of small importance, a few peculiar ones only, such as aroint, avaint, etc., being retained.

All nouns and verbs spelt alike are placed under one heading; and all plural nouns will be found under the same headings with their respective singulars. A few words, such as naught and nought, sallad and sallet, spelt indiscriminately in various editions, are placed under one heading.

When a word recurs on the same subject, and with but little variation of context, in the course of a scene, or stands so closely repeated as inevitably to catch the eye in looking out the passage in the Play, as—"my poverty but not my will consents. I pay thy poverty, and not thy will;" the repetition is merely indicated by the word (rep.) in the Concordance.

The size of the Work has been selected with a view to its ranging with Mr. Charles Knight's popular and beautiful Pictorial Edition of Shakspeare; but it will admit of being cut down so as to conform with the usual octavo volumes.

In Mr. Payne Collier's edition of Shakspeare, he divides the second act of the Midsummer Night's Dream, into two scenes only; but as in most editions it is divided into three, I have adopted the latter mode of reference, merely pointing out the variation here, to avoid any confusion. I avail myself of the present opportunity to offer my thanks publicly to the above-named gentleman, for the kind and handsome manner in which he entrusted me with the then unpublished MS. of his concluding volume, when I took the liberty of applying to him, though unknown, for the purpose of collating his edition with the others, in order to complete my Concordance. Such a mark of confidence was a worthy type of the fraternity of feeling inspired by a close study of our immortal Poet; and it is one of the not least agreeable concomitants of my task, that it has been the means of my receiving generous testimonies of sympathy and encouragement from many of the cleverest men of our age, between whom and myself I could never have hoped for any assimilation, had it not been for the mutual existence of profound veneration and love for the genius of Shakspeare.

Let me not likewise omit to acknowledge (after the fashion of dramatic authors in the preface to their Plays, towards the actors who embody their conceptions) my obligations to my "co-mates and brothers in 'labour'"—the Printers; for though the public can judge of the typographical beauty and accuracy of the pages of the Concordance which they have produced, no one but myself can appreciate their care, minute correctness, and patient assiduity.

Shakspeare himself says: "Most poor matters point to rich ends,"—I trust my humble labour may tend to the "rich end" of furthering a universal study and appreciation of his works;—in this hope, it only remains for me to take leave of those for whom I have been working so many years (I cannot call them my readers), with an assurance that it has been a labour of love, and that it has been productive of many happy thoughts and aspirations to

Their faithful and obedient servant,

Mary Cowden Clarke

sith every action that hath gone with ridiculous and awkward action oddly poised in this way action smiles upon the forehead of this action and whole carriage of this action rode bring action hither, this cannot.
an effeminate man in time of action but he, in heat of action, is more they are in action. Now Ajax iv. 5
he goes upon this present action Coriolanus. i. 1
one voluptuously surfeit out of action that best can add more action to else your actions could grow wondrous he hath in this action outdone in human action and capacity and his actions in their hearts, that for in this business action is eloquence by my body's action, and my action that shall set them in present action you are darkened in this action, sir either had borne the action of yourself my partner in this action, and labour of our great action
the charges of the action than thyself, or me, in personal action. J. Caesar. i. 3 action, nor utterance, nor the power let not a leaner action beguile us. Antony & Cleo. v. 2 putake in the glory of the action but his whole action grows not I never saw an action of such shame think 's his very action speaks in the violence of his action. Cymbeline. i. 3
in my every action, to be if you will make 't an action her pretty action did outsell her gift mine action, and thine own?
though his action be a little more the common men are now in action 'gainst to lock it from action and adventure the action of my life is like it in thy dumb action will I be as. Titus Androm. iii. 2 wanting a hand to fight blush not in actions blacker than partakes her private actions to you.
nor never did my actions yet my actions are as noble as my thoughts action may conveniently rest. iii. (Gower) and with continual action are even as what is done in action, more. v. (Gower) no unchaste action, or dishonoured step live sometimes by action dignified. Rom. & Jul. ii. 3
they are actions that a knight play look, with what courteous action it waves in action, how like an angel and pious action, we do sugar o'er the devil and lose the name of action suits the action to the word, the word to there the action lies in his true nature.
lest, with this piteous action, you convert the use of actions fair and good he likewise not tell him of his action of battery?
my outward action, to say so for if such actions may pass free though our proper son stood in your action used their dearest action in the tented field some action that may offend the iale it were an honest action, to say so in action glorious I had lost these legs pleasure and action make the hours seem how shall I know thee again? Give i. 1 once more come again for ransom i. 1 once more back again; and he that i. 1 thrice up again, and fighting i. 1 comest thou again for ransom? No i. 1 till Harry's back-return again to France v. (cho.)

 in my cap till I see him once again v. 1 do always reach themselves out again v. 2 if Henry were recalled to life again, 1 Hen. VI. i. 1 my life, my joy, again returned i. 1 again, in pity of my hard distress ii. 5 once again we'll sleep secure in Rouen ii. 5 he'll buy again at such a rate ii. 5
 I'll have a bout with you again, or else ii. 5 to get the town again, or die ii. 5 like to have the overthrow again ii. 5 lost, and recovered in a day again! ii. 5 like a Frenchman; turn, and turn again! ii. 5 sought returned again, that dogged ii. 5 flies so, will ne'er return again ii. 5 and turn again unto the warlike v. 2

AGAIN—
 go, and be free again, as Suffolk's 1 Henry VI. v. 3 and I again, in Henry's royal v. 3 I must trouble you again, no v. 3 hope to conquer them again 2 Henry VI. i. 1 delivered up again with peaceful i. 1
 I am pleased again. My lord i. 1 never mount to trouble you again i. 3 restore this cripple to his legs again? ii. 1 toward London, back again ii. 1 from hence to prison back again ii. 3 the world may laugh again ii. 3

 I'll read it over once again iv. 4 farewell, for I must hence again iv. 5 and that will make 'em read again iv. 7 now part them again, lest they iv. 7 are thy sovereign, Clifford kneel again v. 1 go to bed, and dream again, to keep v. 1 my father's blood open it again 3 Henry VI. i. 3 with this we charged again; (repeated) i. 4 behind the one i. 4
 never henceforth shall I joy again ii. 1 making another head to fight again ii. 1 again bestride our foaming steeds (rep.) ii. 1 I'll never pause again, never ii. 1 take leave until we meet again ii. 2 that hopes to rise again ii. 6 and as the air blows it to me again iii. 1 so would you be again to Henry iii. 1 chief to bring him down again iii. 1 for I will hence again, I come to iv. 7 and beat him back again iv. 8 and once again proclaim us king iv. 8 Warwick takes his gift again v. 1 will issue out again, and bid us battle v. 1 might recover all our loss again v. 2 farewell, to meet again in heaven v. 2 doth live again in thee v. 4 take up the sword again, or take Richard III. i. 2 speak it again, and again with i. 2 would cannot not again afford i. 2 what, if it come to thee again? i. 4
 I shall be reconciled to him again i. 4 go back again, and I will send you i. 4 win our ancient right in France again i. 4 until we meet again in heaven iii. 3 and then again begin, and stop again iii. 5 was urged to tell my tale again iii. 7 here Catesby comes again; now Catesby iii. 7 and then again, sweet iii. 7 call them again, I am not made of stone iii. 7 let's to our holy work again iii. 7 ere I can repeat this curse again iv. 1
 I say again, give out, that Anne iv. 1 o'er your own wages again by reviewing iv. 1 shall never speak to thee again iv. 4 and never look upon thy face again iv. 4 again shall you be mother to a king iv. 4 shall come again transformed to iv. 4 and meddle with course again; for Breake iv. 4 whip these stragglers o'er the seas again v. 3 would reduce these bloody days again v. 4 peace lives again; that she may long v. 4
 I say again, there is no English soul, Henry VIII. i. 1 of his master he shall again i. 1 understand again like honest men i. 3 a measure to lead them once again i. 4 when he was brought again to the bar i. 1 but he fell to himself again i. 1 never found again, he said they i. 1 for it grows again fresher than i. 2 poor lady! she's a stranger now again i. 3
 I swear again, I would not be a queen i. 3 therefore, I say again, I utterly abhor i. 3 that again I do refuse you for my i. 2 call her again. Katharine queen i. 4 again, there is sprung up a heretic ii. 2 then, stops again, strikes his breast ii. 2
 'tis well said again; and 'tis a kind ii. 2 in spite of fortune will bring me off again ii. 4 like Lucifer, never to hope again ii. 2 or gold again the noble troops that ii. 2 you are well met once again ii. 2 then rose again, and bowed ii. 2 paced back again to York-place iv. 1 he gave his honours to the world again iv. 1 this fellow let me ne'er see again iv. 1 souls with modesty again iv. 1 being but a private again, relate v. 2 let me ne'er see again, to see chine again v. 4 I'll unarm again; why should I war, Troil. & Cres. i. 1 and such again, as venerable Nestor i. 3 thus once again says Nestor from ii. 2 you shall make it whole again ii. 2 what's are you again? ii. 2 what, billing again? here's ii. 3 retort that heat again to the first ii. 3 reverberates the voice again ii. 3 what that again most dear ii. 3 and yet it may again, if thou ii. 3 fountain of your mind were clear again ii. 3 come you again into my chamber ii. 3 where he answers again, because iv. 4 when shall we see again iv. 4 O heaven! be true, again? iv. 4 when Helen is a maid again iv. 5 warm yet, let us fight again iv. 5 stand again; think 'st thou to catch iv. 5 take and take again, such posterous v. 2 give 't me again. Whose was 't? (repeated) v. 2 thou never shalt mock Diomed again v. 6 anon, shalt hear of me again v. 6 age we void it up again Timon of Athens. i. 2

AGAIN—
 we'll forth again, my Alcibiades, Timon of Ath. ii. 2
 as it grows again toward earth ii. 2 and come again to supper to him ii. 1 go, bid all my friends again, Lucius ii. 4 tures to be half so kind again? iv. 2 the wrapp'd widow wed again iv. 3 and spices to the April day again iv. 3 for showing me again the eyes of man iv. 3 returns to thine own lips again iv. 3 if I thrive well, I'll visit thee again iv. 3 budst thou wealth again, rustic? iv. 3 thou'dst courtier begain, wert thou iv. 3 what else to do, I'll see thee again iv. 3 see him a palm in Athens again v. 1
 I like this well, he will return again v. 2 come not to me again v. 2 go again; and after it again; and over and over v. 2 he comes, and up again; caught it again, Coriol. i. 3 we shall be charged again i. 6 if 'er again I meet him heard to beard i. 10 rather have my wounds to heal again ii. 2 an 't were to give again—but 'tis ii. 3 and knowing myself again, repair to ii. 3 and, now again, on him, that did not ii. 3 to make road upon a again ii. 3 in our ages see their banners ii. 3 my speech, and I will speak 't again iii. 1
 I say again, in soothing them iii. 1
 he cannot be reined again to temperance iii. 3 the four hour you take it off again iii. 3 a small thing would make it flame again iii. 3 his crest up again, and the man in iv. 5 we shall have a stirring world again iv. 5 thrusts forth his horns again into iv. 6 has this thing appeared again to-night . . . Hamlet, i. 1

 if again this apparition come . . . i. 1
 and let us once again assail your ears break these off; look where it comes again . . . i. 1 behold! lo, where it comes again . . . i. 1 and wishes bend again toward France the heaven shall bruit again, re-speaking I shall not look upon his like again . . . i. 2
 perhaps 'twill be back again . . . i. 2 and marble jaws, to cast it up again dead core, again, in complete steel, revisit'st it waves me forth again; I'll follow it and lay your hands again upon my sword . . . i. 5
 I'll speak to him back again to you read bring him to his wonted way . . . ii. 2
 take these again; for to the noble mind make us again count o'er, ere love . . . iii. 2 so again, good night! I must be cruel tempt you again to break; you won't and, sponge, you shall be dry again . . . iii. 4 come again? and will he not come again? (song) he never will come again (song) . . . iv. 5 reverted to my bow again, and not if praises may go back again . . . iv. 7 fear I, this will give it start again to it again, come. Who builds stronger 'twill away again, from me to you . . . v. 1

 and my name shall be Brook. . . .
 there is one master Brook below. . . .
 Brook, is his name. . . .
 such Brooks are welcome to me. . . .
 my name is Brook. Good master Brook. . . . speak, good master Brook. . . .
 master Brook, I will first make. . . .
 master Brook, I say you shall. . . .
 want no mistress Ford, master Brook master Brook, thou shalt know. . . .
 thou master Brook, shalt know him. . . .
 I marvel, I hear not of master Brook. . . .
 now master Brook, you come to. . . .
 master Brook, I will not lie to you. . . .
 you ill-favoured, master Brook. . . .
 No, master Brook, but the speaking. . . .
 that, master Brook, there was the. . . .
 nay, you shall hear, master Brook. . . .
 but mark the sequel, master Brook. . . .
 hissing hot, think of that, master Brook. . . .
 master Brook, I will be thrown into. . . .
 eight and nine is the hour, master Brook
 you shall have her, master Brook. . . .
 I'll to him again in name of Brook. . . .
 how now, master Brook? Master Brook
 I went to her, master Brook, as you see. . . .
 I came from her, master Brook. . . . devil of jealousy in him, master Brook
 in the shape of man, master Brook. . . .
 I tell you all, master Brook. . . .
 strange things in hand, master Brook. . . .
 master Brook, Falstaff's a knave. . . .
 his horns, master Brook. . . .
 paid to master Brook; his horses. . . .
 to Windsor, to one master Brook. . . .
 to master Brook you yet shall hold. . . .
 or by rushy brook, or on the. . . .
 many can brook the weather. . . .
 as o'er a brook, to see fair Portia. . . .
 as both an inland brook into the. . . .
 or brook such disgrace well as he. . . .
 books in the running brooks, sermons. . . .
 upon the brook that brawls along. . . .
 the extreme verge of the swift brook. . . .
 he is drowned in the brook. . . .
 painted by a running brook. . . .
 my business cannot brook this. . . .
 I cannot brook thy sight. . . .
 how brooks your grace the air. . . .
 our attempt brooks no division. . . .
 one English brook a double brook. . . .
 I can no longer brook thy vanities. . . .
 I better brook the loss of brittle life. . . .
 then brook abridgement. . . .
 our late sovereign ne'er could brook. . . .
 will we brook his treason? . . .
 business will not brook delay. . . .
 for flying at the brook, I saw not. . . .
 the water where the brook is deep. . . .
 he cannot brook hard usage. . . .
 knowing how hardly I can brook abuse. . . .
 if they can brook to bow a knee. . . .
 could never brook retreat, cheered. . . .
 for anger burns, I cannot brook it. . . .
 I cannot brook delay. . . .
 that makes small brooks to flow. . . .
 can better brook thy dagger's point. . . .
 in that you brook it ill, it makes. . . .
 a bark to brook no mighty sea. . . .
 he cannot brook the access of reproof. . . .
 should brook as little wrongs. . . .
 the cold brook, candied with ice. . . .
 insolence can brook to be commanded. . . . cannot brook competitors in love. . . .

 Brutus, what shall be done? . . . ii. 4 Brutus: he draws Mark Antony . . . ii. 4 what, Brutus! pardon Caesar . . . ii. 4 do not Brutus look back . . . ii. 4 go to the pulpit, Brutus . . . ii. 4 Brutus shall lead; and we will grace . . . ii. 4 this, Brutus, did my master bid me . . . ii. 4 say, I love Brutus, and honour him . . . ii. 4 Brutus will vouchsafe that Antony . . . ii. 4 so well as Brutus living (rep.) . . . ii. 4 first, Marcus Brutus, will I shake . . . ii. 4 now, Decius Brutus, yours; now yours . . . ii. 4 Brutus, a word with you . . . ii. 4
 I will hear Brutus speak . . . ii. 4 the noble Brutus is ascended . . . ii. 4 Brutus' love to Caesar was no less . . . ii. 4
 why Brutus rose against Caesar . . . ii. 4 Brutus, none. None. Then Brutus . . . ii. 4 to Caesar, than you should do to Brutus . . . ii. 4 live, Brutus, live! live! Bring him . . . ii. 4 shall now be crowned in Brutus . . . ii. 4 peace; silence! Brutus speaks . . . ii. 4 Brutus' sake, I am Brutus' guest . . . ii. 4
 'twere best he speak no harm of Brutus . . . ii. 4 the noble Brutus hath told you, Caesar . . . ii. 4 under leave of Brutus, and the rest (rep.) . . . ii. 4 Brutus says, he was ambitious (rep.) . . . ii. 4 not to disprove what Brutus speaks . . . ii. 4
 I should do Brutus wrong, and Cassius . . . ii. 4
 the well-beloved Brutus stabbed . . . ii. 4

 I should not then ask Casca what . . . i. 2 tell us the manner of it, gentle Casca . . . i. 2 but you, and I, and honest Casca . . . i. 2 will you sup with me to-night, Casca? . . . i. 2 Casca; brought you Casca home? . . . i. 3 good-night then, Casca: this disturbed . . . i. 3 a Roman. Casca by your voice . . . i. 3 thus unbraced, Casca, as you see . . . i. 3 you are dull, Casca; and those sparks . . . i. 3 would I, Casca, name to thee . . . i. 3 you speak to Casca; and to such a man . . . i. 3 no, it is Casca; one incorporate to . . . i. 3 come, Casca, you and I will, yet, ere day . . . i. 3 Casca, this, Cinna, and this, Metellus . . . i. 3 good-morrow, Casca; Calpurnius . . . i. 3 come not near Casca; have an eye . . . iii. 3 (paper)

 CASSIO—Michael Cassio, a Florentine . . . Othello, i. 1
 Cassio is a proper name . . . i. 3
 Michael Cassio, lieutenant . . . i. 3 but this same Cassio,—though he speak . . . ii. 1
 I thank you, valiant Cassio . . . ii. 1 how say you, Cassio? is he not a most . . . ii. 1 that Cassio loves her, I do well believe . . . ii. 1 degree of this fortune, as Cassio does . . . ii. 1 Cassio knows you not . . . ii. 1 anger Cassio, either by speaking too loud . . . ii. 1 but by the displanting of Cassio . . . ii. 1 whatever Cassio does, I will be true . . . ii. 1
 I'll have our Michael Cassio on the hip . . . ii. 1
 I fear Cassio with my nightgown too . . . ii. 1 to put our Cassio in some action that . . . ii. 3 the virtue that appears in Cassio . . . ii. 3
 I do love Cassio well, a case . . . ii. 3 than it should do offence to Michael Cassio . . . ii. 3 Cassio following him with determined . . . ii. 3 this gentleman steps in to Cassio . . . ii. 3 of swords, and Cassio high in oath . . . ii. 3 though Cassio is a little wrong . . . ii. 3 yet, surely, Cassio, I believe, received . . . ii. 3 light to Cassio; Cassio, I love thee . . . ii. 3 to counsel Cassio to this parallel course . . . ii. 3 Cassio hath beaten thee (repeated) . . . ii. 3 Cassio, I am glad you will be true . . . ii. 3
 he may Cassio find solliciting his wife . . . ii. 3 one Cassio treats her a little favour . . . ii. 3 good Cassio, I will do all my abilities . . . ii. 3 do not doubt, Cassio, but I will have . . . ii. 3 whatever shall befall me, I will be true . . . ii. 3 with Cassio's suit: therefore (rep.) . . . ii. 3 Cassio parted from my wife? (rep.) . . . ii. 3 why, your lieutenant Cassio . . . ii. 3 what! Michael Cassio, that came . . . ii. 3 did not Michael Cassio when you wooed . . . ii. 3 not that, when Cassio left my wife . . . ii. 3 for Michael Cassio,—I dare be sworn . . . ii. 3
 I think that Cassio is an honest man . . . ii. 3 observe her well with friend . . . ii. 3 Cassio's my worthy friend . . . ii. 3 it be fit that Cassio have his place . . . ii. 3 will in Cassio's lodging lose this napkin . . . ii. 3
 I found not Cassio's kisses on her lips . . . ii. 3
 I lay with Cassio lately . . . ii. 3 one of this kind is Cassio's matter? . . . ii. 3 to day, see Cassio wipe his beard with . . . ii. 3 hear thee say, that Cassio lives not . . . ii. 3 sirrah, where lieutenant Cassio lies? . . . ii. 3 till Cassio be called to him . . . ii. 3
 I have sent to bid Cassio come speak . . . ii. 3
 I pray, let Cassio be received again . . . ii. 3
 I pray, talk me of Cassio . . . ii. 3 look you! Cassio, and my husband . . . ii. 3 how now, good Cassio? what's the news . . . ii. 3 alas! thrice gentle Cassio, my adventure . . . ii. 3 go seek him: Cassio, walk hereabout . . . ii. 3 save you, friend Cassio! . . . ii. 3
 I was going to your lodging Cassio . . . ii. 3 to Cassio, I have been . . . ii. 3 how now, Cassio? What is the matter . . . ii. 3 such a man, Cassio came hither . . . ii. 3 now will I question Cassio of Bianca . . . ii. 3 it is a creature, that does on Cassio . . . ii. 3 do you hear, Cassio? Now he importunes . . . ii. 3 crying, O dear Cassio! as if were . . . ii. 3 and for Cassio, I'll be his undertaker . . . ii. 3
 I thank you, how does lieutenant Cassio? . . . ii. 3
 to Cassio, I have been . . . ii. 3
 for the love I bear to Cassio . . . ii. 3 deputed Cassio in his government . . . ii. 3 Cassio shall have my place . . . ii. 3 you have seen Cassio and she together . . . ii. 3
 to Cassio, I have been . . . ii. 3
 as the removing of Cassio . . . ii. 3 he kill Cassio, or Cassio him . . . ii. 3 if Cassio do remain, he hath . . . ii. 3 the voice of Cassio: Iago keeps his word . . . ii. 3 Cassio, I have been . . . ii. 3
 O my dear Cassio! my sweet Cassio! (rep.) . . . ii. 3 Cassio, may you suspect who they . . . ii. 3 alas, he faints, O Cassio! (rep.) . . . ii. 3 patience a while, good Cassio . . . ii. 3 how do you, Cassio? O a clock . . . ii. 3 he that lies slain here, Cassio was my . . . ii. 3 Cassio hath been set on in the dark . . . ii. 3 alas, good gentleman! alas, good Cassio! . . . ii. 3 go know of Cassio where he stipped . . . ii. 3

CASSIO—let's go see poor Cassio dressed . . . Othello, v. 1 gave thee, thou gavest to Cassio . . . v. 2 never loved Cassio, but with such . . . v. 2 like she comes to speak of Cassio's death . . . v. 2 Cassio, my lord, has killed a young . . . v. 2 Cassio killed? No, Cassio is not (rep.) . . . v. 2 heavenly true! Cassio did tup her . . . v. 2 false to wedlock? Ay, with Cassio . . . v. 2 Cassio! did you say with Cassio? (rep.) . . . v. 2 that she with Cassio hath the act of . . . v. 2 Cassio confessed it; and she did gratify . . . v. 2
 she give it Cassio! no, alas . . . v. 2 did you and he consent in Cassio's death? . . . v. 2 the death of Cassio to be undertook . . . v. 2 came you, Cassio, by that handkerchief . . . v. 2 is taken off, and Cassio rules in Cyprus . . . v. 2 CASSIUS—let me not hinder, Cassius, Jul. Caesar, i. 2 therefore, be not deceived . . . i. 2 among which number, Cassius, be . . . i. 2 no, Cassius; for the eye sees not . . . i. 2 dangers would you lead me, Cassius . . . i. 2
 I would not, Cassius; yet I love him . . . i. 2 furthest thou, Cassius, now leap in . . . i. 2 help me, Cassius, or I sink . . . i. 2 and Cassius is a wretched creature . . . i. 2
 but, look you, Cassius, the angry . . . i. 2 Cassius has a lean and hungry look . . . i. 2 so on and so on, that I speak of . . . i. 2 and he were Cassius, he should not . . . i. 3 your ear is good; Cassius, what night . . . i. 3 that you mean: is it not, Cassius? . . . i. 3 Cassius from bondage will (rep.) . . . i. 3
 O Cassius, if you could but hear . . . i. 3 since Cassius first did whet me against . . . i. 3
 'tis your brother Cassius at the door . . . i. 3 will seem too bloody, Caius Cassius . . . i. 3 alas, good Cassius, do not think of him . . . i. 3 falsehood of Cassius, he will . . . ii. 3 (per) Cassius or Caesar never shall (rep.) . . . ii. 3 as low as to thy foot doth Cassius fall . . . ii. 3 and Cassius too. Where's Publius? . . . ii. 3 Cassius, do I take you? . . . ii. 3 pardon me, Caius . . . ii. 3 Cassius, go you into the other street . . . ii. 3 those that will follow Cassius, go . . . ii. 3
 I will hear Cassius, and compare . . . ii. 3 Brutus wrong, and Cassius wrong . . . ii. 3 ran Cassius' dagger through . . . ii. 3 Brutus and Cassius are rid like madmen . . . ii. 3 to Brutus; to Cassius; burn all . . . ii. 3 Brutus and Cassius, are levying powers . . . ii. 3 Cassius needs. He is at hand . . . ii. 3 in general, are come with Cassius . . . ii. 3 Cassius, be content; speak your griefs . . . ii. 3 in my tent, Cassius, enlarge your . . . ii. 3 let me tell you, Cassius . . . ii. 3 O Cassius, I have named of Cassius . . . ii. 3 go to; you're not Cassius . . . ii. 3 is no terror, Cassius, in your threats . . . ii. 3 like Cassius? should I have (rep.) . . . ii. 3 alone, on Cassius, for Cassius is . . . ii. 3 to Cassius, I have named of Cassius . . . ii. 3 O Cassius, you are yoked with a lamb . . . ii. 3 hath Cassius lived to be but mirth . . . ii. 3 yes, Cassius, and, henceforth, when . . . ii. 3 O Cassius, I am sick of many griefs . . . ii. 3 in which I bury all unkindness, Cassius . . . ii. 3 noble, noble Cassius, good-night . . . ii. 3 on business to my brother Cassius . . . ii. 3 commend me to my brother Cassius . . . ii. 3
 if Cassius might have ruled . . . ii. 3 Cassius still . . . ii. 3
 this very day was Cassius' day . . . ii. 3 no, Cassius, no; think not, thou . . . ii. 3 and for ever, farewell, Cassius! . . . ii. 3
 O Cassius, Brutus gave the word . . . ii. 3
 O Cassius, fly from this country . . . ii. 3
 O Cassius! fly from this country . . . ii. 3
 as Cassius' legions are by (rep.) . . . ii. 3 but Cassius is no more . . . ii. 3 so in his red blood Cassius' day is set . . . ii. 3 thou send me forth brave Cassius? . . . ii. 3 see how I regarded Caius Cassius . . . ii. 3 come, Cassius' sword, and find Titinius' . . . ii. 3
 he have not crowned dead Cassius . . . ii. 3
 I shall find time, Cassius, I shall . . . ii. 3 moved pale Cassius to conspire? . . . Ant. & Cleo. ii. 6

 I come to speak with sir John . . . iv. 5 till she come down; I come to speak . . . iv. 5 there is a friend of mine come to town . . . iv. 5 and therefore is know to come . . . iv. 5 if it should come to the ear of the court . . . iv. 5 now, whence come you? . . . iv. 5 come up into my chamber . . . iv. 5
 I come to her in white . . . v. 2
 mistress Page, come down . . . v. 2
 I pray you come; hold up the jest . . . v. 5 here comes master Fenton . . . v. 5 you must come in earlier o' nights. Twelfth Night, i. 3 for here comes sir Andrew Ague-bace . . . i. 3 and then comes the countess . . . i. 3 here comes the count . . . i. 4 here comes my lady . . . i. 5 for here he comes, one of thy kin . . . i. 5 how have you come so early by . . . i. 5 and then I come behind . . . i. 5 of that too, and therefore comes that . . . i. 5 come to what is important in't . . . i. 5 unless perchance, you come to me . . . i. 5 if that comes, you will come this . . . i. 5 but come what may, I do . . . i. 5 so hardly to come again in his affairs . . . i. 5 here comes the fool, I faith . . . i. 5 what's to come is still unsure . . . ii. 3 (song) come like the sun, and set . . . ii. 3 (song) that they come from my niece . . . ii. 3 come hither, boy; if ever thou . . . ii. 4 (song) come away, come away, death . . . ii. 4 (song) come thy ways, signior Fabian (rep.) . . . ii. 5 come by these noble changes . . . ii. 5 here comes the little villain . . . ii. 5 for here comes the trout that . . . ii. 5 and I have heard herself come thus . . . ii. 5 having come from a day-bed . . . ii. 5 and then I come behind . . . ii. 5 here comes my noble gull-catcher . . . ii. 5 he will come to her in yellow . . . ii. 5 construe to them whence you come . . . ii. 5 every feather that comes before his eye . . . ii. 5 madam, I come to what you . . . ii. 5 when wit and youth is come to harvest . . . ii. 5 yet come again: for thou . . . ii. 5 the youngest wren of nine comes . . . ii. 5 come, I am bringing us where he is . . . ii. 5 he says he'll come . . . ii. 5 best have guard about you, if he come . . . ii. 5 it did come to his hands . . . ii. 5 and I'll come to thee . . . ii. 5 I'll come to you, as I have . . . ii. 5 oh ho! do you come near me now? . . . ii. 5 can come between me and the . . . ii. 5 ay, Biddy, come with me . . . ii. 5 for it comes to pass off, that . . . ii. 5 he will come to me . . . ii. 5 here he comes with your niece . . . ii. 5
 I beseech you, come again . . . ii. 5 well, come again to-morrow . . . ii. 5 come on! To t . . . ii. 5 here comes the man, sir . . . ii. 5 this comes with seeking you . . . ii. 5 to bid you come speak with her . . . ii. 5 come on, sir; hold . . . ii. 5 you are well fleshed; come on . . . ii. 5 who comes to visit Malvolio . . . ii. 5 come by and by to my chamber . . . ii. 5 but here comes the lady . . . ii. 5 willing it shall come to note . . . ii. 5 till I come again . . . ii. 5 here comes the man, sir, that . . . v. 1 here comes the countess . . . v. 1 here comes sir Toby halting . . . v. 1 you come to fright us . . . v. 1 so comes it, lady, you have been . . . v. 1 bade me come smiling . . . v. 1 nor no brawl to come . . . v. 1 bid come before us Angelo . . . Meas. for Meas. i. 1 look, where he comes . . . i. 1
 I come to know your pleasure . . . i. 1 come not to composition with . . . i. 2 where madam Mitigation comes! . . . i. 2 under her roof, as come to . . . i. 2 here comes signior Claudio . . . i. 2 whence comes this restraint? . . . i. 2 and nothing come in partial . . . i. 2 this comes off well . . . i. 2 come me to what was done . . . i. 2 cannot come to that yet . . . i. 2 but you shall come to it . . . i. 2 now, sir, come on: what was . . . i. 2 the time is yet to come . . . i. 2 what's come upon thee . . . i. 2 come hither to me, master Froth . . . i. 2
 I never come into any room . . . i. 2 if you live to see this come to pass . . . i. 2 come hither to me master Elbow; come . . . i. 2 he will come straight . . . i. 2 come again to-morrow . . . i. 2 well, come to me to-morrow . . . i. 2
 I come to visit the afflicted spirits . . . i. 2 look, here comes one . . . i. 3

COME—come all to help him . . . Meas. for Meas. ii. 4
 I am come to know your pleasure . . . ii. 4 let it come on . . . ii. 1 who's there? come in: the wish . . . ii. 1 that now you are come, you will . . . ii. 1 come your way, sir . . . ii. 2 if he be a whoremonger . . . ii. 2 his neck will come to your waist . . . ii. 2 come your ways, sir, come . . . ii. 2 but who comes here? . . . ii. 2 a year and a quarter's come . . . ii. 2 late come from the see, in special . . . ii. 2
